Christmas '89 is now history and we hope you have fond memories of this one. We can say ours was quite and relatively uneventful, which is fine and exactly the way we would prefer it to be. The cold weather we had is a cluded the following incidents: one bit more than us southern folks are equipped to live with, but most of us came through without major injury. We understand there was a whole bunch of folks who suffered the aggravation of frozen water pipes that later became leaking (or pouring) rivers in or under their homes, but they will overcome this also

We would be sitting in our ol' big easy chair, reading and/or watching the license revoked, and two D.U.I. news when thoughts of those Americans in Panama would come to our mind. We would say a little prayer of thanks to them for making our home secure. There was a special prayer for those who made the supreme sacrifice and also for their loved ones left behind. Their Christmas wasn't so nice. The president can stand up and confess that the price we paid (deaths and wounds) wasn't too high a price to pay for getting things straight in Panama, and we are inclined to agree. The way things were headed, we would have probably suffered these deaths one at a time anyway and still had to run the crooks out. However when it comes down to the families a.m.); Rescue run to Elba Packing who personally suffered, they might have different ideas.

We hope you have an enjoyable new year and if you plan to partake in a New Year's celebration which includes alcohol, we plead with you to get you a designated driver . . . before the party. STUDENTS STUDY ATMOSPHERIC PRESSURE . . . By Jennifer Flowers

Atmospheric pressure recently was studied by Mrs. Anita Grant's Earth Science class. In order to make a more accurate study of this pressure each student made a barometer. Atmospheric pressure is the force of air or air pressure in the atmosphere and is measured by a barometer. There are two types of barometers: aneroid and

The anerold barometer is a metal box from which most of the air is removed.

The top of the box is a thin metal disk which bends under pressure. As air presses down on the box, the disk bends inward. The pressure causes a spring to move within the box. The spring is attached to a needle that shows the amount of pressure exerted by air. This is the type barometer the science class made, except they constructed theirs from a coffee can, plastic wrap and a drinking straw.

The mercury barometer is more accurate than the aneroid, but is too large for practical uses. It is made of a long tube closed on one end. The tube is filled with mercury and the open end is placed upright in a dish of mercury. The mercury

Just A Fact

By Marie Jackson Many people have heard that polyester burns if it gets too close to fire. So imagine how horrified I felt when my mother told me my Halloween costume was a polyester suit. The yellow tie, the pink suit and jacket, and a pair of gray pants were all 100 percent polyester By the time Halloween night came, my mind was like a bowl of jello. I was so scared that a fire would start or smoke would blow on me and burn me. I was also scared that somebody with bad breath might breathe on me

So there I was dressed to impress in my suit. The night was perfect for trickor-treating. People were having bonfires; the night was dark and spooky the air made a smoky screen; and the children were laughing and screaming Although it was the perfect night for Mr. And Mrs. Z.C. High School Chosen trick-or-treating, my mind told me to stay in the car. But for some reason I got out of the car and even went from house to house. "Be brave, be brave," I kept telling myself. Little did that help or every time I saw a bright light I moved with caution, and every time I saw an area of smoke, I moved around

When I got to one house, I got a real scare, because there were four jack-olanterns on the steps. Their laughing mouths held fire and smoke. I gathered enough courage and reached the first step, then the second. "Only two more to go," I told myself.

As I stepped on the third step, there appeared an image surrounded by smoke. The image was a man in a green polyester suit. My first thought was that his pants were even more bel bottom than mine. The second was "if he catches on fire even his jerry curl As I pondered on my third thought, he laughed and disappeared. The jacko-lanterns were still sitting there laughing, saying, "Come on girl, come get this candy." Well, since Bienie was not raised as a fool, I got the heck out of "At home at last," I said. The very irst thing I did was take the suit off and put it in the trash outside. Then I saw him again. There he was behind the trash can. I closed my eyes for only a second, but when I opened them again, he was gone.

"It's only my imagination," I said to myself. So I went back into the house to enjoy the fish my mother was burning. About 30 minutes later, after I was settled in front of the TV, there came a knock at the door.

"Get the door, Mary, I'm fighting with the fish," said my mother. I went over to the door with not a care in the world. "Who is it?" I asked. "Lawrence," the voice answered. Being a friend of the family, I let him him. "It's him!" I screamed when I opened the door. As I gazed at his suit and hair on fire, I fainted to the floor. The next morning when I woke up, I thought last night was just a dream. But there were clues that told me it was real. The clue was the big knot on my head. My second clue was the faint smell of burnt fish. My last two clues were lying beside the door; over by the door were ashes from the polyester suit and curl activator that were fried to a golden brown. It's just a fact that I would never wear polyester or get a curl in my hair.

This marked the seventh Christmas since we began our family and for the first time ever Santa Claus didn't bring anything that had to be put together or needed batteries. There were still plenty of presents under the tree to open and lots of toys for the girls, but this year all Dad had to worry about was how long it would take before things started being broken. From the Mularz Family....Happy Holidays!!!!

ELBA TIGERS MAKE GOOD SHOWING IN TOURNEY

When the Dairy Queen Christmas Classic basketball tournament was organized back in November Coach Hank Kennedy stated he wanted his team to get some experience during the holidays to get them ready for the rest of the season. It sounded like a good idea to me, especially since the Tigers got off to a late start due to the football playoffs. However, when Coach Kennedy told me he had teams like Dothan, Hillcrest, Opp, Louisville, Kinston, Coffee Springs and Luverne coming to town, I wondered just how much experience we'd get a chance to get. I mean, if we lost in the first round we'd just be hosting a tourney for some other folks and our players would still be sitting down

Well, my fears never came to pass! The Elba Tigers claimed big wins over previously undefeated Coffee Springs and Louisville (a team the Tigers beat at the buzzer to open the season), and then played 6A Dothan off their feet before losing by only five-points. If it was experience that Coach Kennedy wanted, it was experience that he got!

I didn't get to watch a whole lot of the action because I had to help with the concession stand, but the coaches I talked to who did watch the action said that the Tigers had their best squad in years and could very well contend for a state title. The coaches all agreed that Elba played as hard as any team, anywhere, and would only get better as the season progressed. One coach, who has a state title to his credit, predicted that the Tigers had what it took to go all the way.

I'm not ready to jump on that band wagon and make any predictions that would put added pressure on the players and give the Tigers' opponents anything to use against them, but I too am confident that this year's team has as much talent as any Elba team in years. The Tigers have size inside, play solid defense and have some outside shooters that can fill it up. I'll be the first to point out that the team has a long way to go and must work hard to reach its potential; however, the football team proved what hard work can do and who knows....you gotta believe!

SEAC TOURNAMENT WILL BE ONE TO WATCH

The annual Southeast Alabama Conference basketball tournament will scored 23 to lead Luverne and Carlget underway next week in Kinston and it should be quite a show to see. The tourney will feature the undefeated New Brockton Gamecocks; the Brantley Bulldogs, led by high-scoring Wesley Person; the Kinston Bulldogs, always a threat to win it all on their home court, and the Zion Chapel Rebels, a team that can beat anybody on any given night.

There are eight teams in the event and I'm not trying to belittle any of the others. I'm just convinced that New Brockton and Brantley will get it on in ers 11. the finals and when that happens, be there!

NEW BROCKTON'S BOLAND TO SIGN WITH AU

New Brockton's Todd Boland announced last week that he had committed to continue his football career at Auburn. The 6-4, 230 pound, offensive and never looked back to defeat the linemen dominated the 2A ranks throughout his three-year career at New Kinston Bulldogs 68-57. Brockton and was being heavily recruited by just about every college around. Some so called experts may question whether or not a player from a 2A school will be able to make it at a major college. The answer is YES!!!! Wood surprised the Devils by New Brockton sent Joe Godwin on to an outstanding career at Alabama and Coach Leavy Boutwell teaches football just the way it is supposed to be ville began to settle down in the done. Look for Boland to make it big before his playing days are through.
